

SEMINAR AND RESEARCH TECHNIQUES HOMEWORK ONE

1. Research is a systematic process of investigation, study or inquiry that aims to discover, interpret or expand knowledge in a particular field of study, by gathering information, analyzing data and drawing conclusions, to answer specific questions or solve problems.
- 2.

A topic is said to be researchable when it meets the following criteria

- ✓ It should address an important question or gap in knowledge within its respective field. (Significance).
- ✓ It should be relevant to the current state of knowledge and existing body of research in the field.
- ✓ It should have clear research questions or objectives.
- ✓ It should be feasible to investigate within the available resources of time, funding, etc.
- ✓ There should be access to data or information.
- ✓ The topic should be applicable to the appropriate research methods and techniques available.
- ✓ It should adhere to ethical guidelines.
- ✓ It should have the potential to generate new insights.

Submitted by Chia Rephah Ndim.

Level 500 Nursing.